The House You Built: Celebrating 40 Years of Fearless Advocacy

Forty years ago, a small group of committed citizens were concerned about hunger and homelessness. Most people think of Patricia Hussey and Barbara Ferraro whose dynamic and tenacious leadership invigorated Covenant House for our first 25 years.

But it was a small band of individuals that fueled a city's imagination for what Covenant House would become. There were four people who played the most pivotal roles: Bob Rodecker, the first President of the Covenant House Board of Directors; Pat Perelman, the first Director; Jim Lewis, the Rector at St. John's Episcopal Church at that time; and Milford Zeigler, who organized the renovation of the original house next door to St. John's.

The seeds for what would become Covenant House were planted in the 1970s. Members of several downtown churches and synagogues were concerned about hunger and homelessness in Charleston. The momentum from the faith community grew into social action and the Charleston Interfaith Council on Social Concerns was formed. Excerpted from the oral history project by Julie Pratt.

As we honor our history, we do so with an informed and hopeful gaze toward the future.

From our earliest origins of opening a space to engage our most vulnerable—where they played dominos, exchanged stories, and took a shower—to moving

With gratitude,

 Reverend W. Patterson Lyles
President, Board of Directors

a family into permanent housing with their own private shower—we now have almost unfathomable resources and evidenced based programming to prevent homelessness that were never contemplated 40 years ago. We see the miracle of our work, even in midst of the despair. When one is prepared and ready to participate in their own recovery, we will be here for them.

The Covenant House Board of Directors believes in and supports budgets that provide a living wage, liberal paid time away from work, and excellent health care for the Covenant House staff. Our activism begins at home.

Our House is filled with people—from all races, faith traditions, and sexual orientations—who have created a work culture that is revered, cherished, and nurtured. We can all be the fullest expression of who we were created to be.

Covenant House is a special place. It creates space for deep connections. These experiences—and people—forever change you, and those around you. It is this spirit that informs and inspires our work. You can feel it in the House.

As we celebrate our 40 years of service, it is with great humility that we thank this community for its unwavering and generous commitment to our most vulnerable neighbors. Let's face the future with the boldness and courage that lies within us.
